There is nothing more at variance with human reason than this article of faith. For who but God alone could persuade us that bodies which are now liable to corruption will, after having rotten away, or after they have been consumed by fire or torn to pieces by wild beasts, will not merely be restored entire but in a greatly better condition. Do not all our apprehensions of things straightaway reject this as a thing fabulous, nay, most absurd?

- John Calvin

As weak as it [the human body of believers] is now without all power and ability when it lies in the grave, just so strong will it eventually become when the time arrives, so that not a thing will be impossible for it if it has mind for it, and it will be so light and agile that in an instant it can float here below on the earth or above in heaven.

- Martin Luther
