

Times of Trouble

(May 30, 2023)

I hope you had a Happy Memorial Day! As an aside, enjoy your freedom while it lasts.

I was hoping to get through more of my list that I posted last week, but that obviously didn't happen. Funny how life can get in the way of best intentions. Nonetheless, that list still remains and I'm adding to it, so I'll have more this week. For now, I'd simply like to post some updates for what's actually happening throughout the globe.

Debt Ceiling

Daniel 12:1 says at the very end of days prior to His return, there shall be trouble such as has never been. If we aren't there I cannot imagine what that will look like.

The debt ceiling has not been raised, according to J D Rucker.[1] It has been eliminated until January 2025 (if Congress ultimately approves it). This action means the death knell for the USA regardless of how pundits spin it, because money can now be spent hand over fist without limit.

The WHO

In other areas, the WHO wants to have absolute and final control over all nations regarding "health." Should another pandemic occur (it will [2]), they want to be able to call the shots. If the USA signs onto this, then we will simply follow the dictates of the WHO (though I'm not sure how it would be enforced). This removes the USA's sovereignty regardless of what "fact-checkers" tell us through their obfuscation.

If you believe the AP, they'll tell you that if the US does sign onto the treaty it will not give away our sovereignty, [3] but of course. the AP (and Snopes, etc.), is lying through redirection. If we allow a foreign organization to tell us what to do, then sovereignty over this nation's health is gone.

As of today, no one is sure if the US has signed onto the treaty, but any treaty entered into by the USA needs to be approved by the Senate. The sneakiness of the WHO treaty is that it would take effect immediately, bypassing the Senate vote. We will see what becomes actual.

COVID and the Jab

The FDA way back in November of 2022 stated their concern regarding myocarditis from the jab for children. [4] They approved the jab anyway. With more pandemics reportedly on the way, what are the chances more jabs are also in the works and FDA will approve them?

China is warning of a new CV variant named XBB that they say is on the way.[5] It's not actually as bad as they want us to believe though, but they do love their fear porn. [6]

Sadly, I am to the point of having little pity for folks who continue to line up for more jabs. I apologize if that offends, but it's not like the info has not been available. Many have tried hard to warn the world and got ignored and censored for their trouble. In some cases they faced medical boards who attempted to take their licenses to practice medicine. Because of misinfo from our government (including Fraudci and others), many people died and sadly, many more will die.

Recently deceased Dr. Buttar made a video shortly before his death in which he outlined what the next pandemic may look like and how it will be perpetrated.[7] Some will watch the video, roll their eyes and have a good guffaw. Others will conclude, "Yeah, I wouldn't put it passed the powers that be."

At least some of what Buttar says makes perfect sense because it's inline with numerous other doctors. I've always thought - based on the many doctors who continually spoke of a coming "cytokine storm" in people who took the jab months or even a few years after taking it - that we would start seeing people dropping like flies in huge numbers. Dr. Buttar provides a reason he thinks this will occur. You decide.

Burgeoning Economic Recession

The growing recession will continue to worsen. First we had supply chain disruption because of the CV shutdown. Microchips for vehicles were hard to get as one example, remember? Now we've got a glut of new vehicles that fewer are buying because things have caught up, but people have less disposable income for new cars. Car dealers are having to seriously slash prices to move vehicles on their lots.

The housing industry is also starting to take a hit and will likely get dramatically worse, according to industry analysts. It is amazing to me how expensive homes have become (in a repeat leading up to 2008?). However, I believe like the 2008 housing industry crisis, much of the current home values have been artificially increased.

Food is also going to be hit hard apparently. Fertilizers have been in serious short supply and weather has also affected crop growth. Reasons for a coming famine?

We've already noticed how things from last year to this have nearly doubled in price and it's becoming more difficult to obtain the things we have always bought as well. You may be experiencing the same.

However, on the surface, it appears as though things are running smoothly in spite of inflation and some shortages. Why isn't it worse yet?

OPEC+ was supposed to start reducing oil output by 1.5 million barrels per day this month. Did that happen or not? If it did, it's not noticeable at the pump. Last week, gas prices dipped down to $2.73/gallon (cash price) in my area. A few days later, in one day, the same gas station went up to $3.03, then $3.19. Something is very weird. Are they deliberately playing a shell game to hide things for as long as possible?

Meanwhile the government continues spending billions like it actually has it, which means our national debt continues to climb. With debt ceiling eliminated, it will get exponentially worse quickly.

If we did not have the Federal Reserve (a globalist central bank), our debt would not be what it is because we wouldn't be able to borrow money to "print." We'd be forced to stay within our budgetary means as a nation.

The problem is due to our reliance on a central bank that we have the debt we have and it cannot continue unchecked. Our debt is made up of two things; the actual money we borrow from the Fed and the interest we must pay back on the loans. It cannot continue without a major burst of the economic bubble. Are they holding it together intentionally now, as they seemed to do just before the Wall Street

Stock Market Crash that gave way to the Great Depression in the 1920's and 30's, where the rich got richer and poor became destitute? It's possible.

In reality, even if they had increased the debt ceiling, the whole thing is destined to eventually come crashing down at some point. [8][9][10] It's unsustainable like a person who eventually must file for bankruptcy.

The other day, one of the mainstream news bureaus (I forget which one), actually told people to stock up on food. Imagine that. They're starting to acknowledge coming shortages. Between terrible weather that has destroyed crops, the purposeful (or accidental), serious shortages of fertilizer, destruction of millions of chickens and other animals, and the selling and slaughter of cows prematurely (due to lack of feed), we may begin experiencing serious shortages resulting from it and the only thing that's kept it at bay was a backlog that made it artificially appear as though things were fine. It might be best to mentally prepare for large empty shelves in stores.

Wokeness in Christendom

More churches and pastors are going woke and embracing the world's philosophy. Get out of those churches. Do not think you should stay to change it. You won't change it.

There are many examples that prove this and I hope to soon highlight wolves like Tim Keller (and others in his "gospel coalition"), who focus only on the attributes of Jesus that make people feel good, ignoring His other attributes/character.

These pastors are embracing trans people because Jesus would do that, they say. He would, but He would also not hesitate to let them know where they stand with the Father. Jesus is not just "love" as humans understand love. He most definitely IS love, but His love includes justice, holiness, and vengeance among other things. He will destroy all sin, not hobnob with it. The job is to point out people's need for Jesus. They need Him because they are sinners and have fallen short of the grace of God, but Jesus provides the way back. For an actual biblical view of this, Pastor Brian McKenney of Northside Calvary Chapel, provides insight in this recent message. [11]

We need to remember Jesus came (the first time), not to judge the world. In John 9:39, He states, "For judgment I have come into this world, that those who do not see may see, and that those who see may be made blind." What that means is that the result of His incarnation was ultimately judging, meaning He will judge this world, but not the reason for His incarnation. In John 12:47, Jesus says, "...for I did not come to judge the world but to save the world." The main reason Jesus came the first time was to offer salvation. Those who rejected Him then or now, will face judgment when He comes the second time. Judgment of all people is inevitable. Our job as Christians is not to make the world feel comfortable, but to tell them of their need for Jesus. To offer salvation automatically means there is something to save us from and those who reject it will face that judgment.

There's so much more I could add to this article but I want to end on a high note involving a brave woman from the Old Testament. Esther was a woman of virtue and character. She was willing to die if it came to that because of her kinship with Israel. She was placed on this earth during the reign of Ahasuerus at just the right time. God created her for that moment when she eventually became Ahasuerus' wife and queen over the empire of Persia and saved dispersed Jews. Take the time to reread the book of Esther. It is filled with examples of how God operates and the faith of simple people like you and me.

There are many examples of how God chose specific people in Scripture for specific purposes at specific times. You and I are here on this earth now because God has willed it. He has important work for us to accomplish. We do it by relying on His strength and direction and by remaining free of the world's stain. As we trust Him, He opens doors for greater work. We cannot shrink from the times in which we currently live. Yes, it may be tiring and frustrating but God should guide us, not the world.

We must strive to enter into His will daily. We must develop a greater fear of offending Him than a fear of what this world can do to us. Now is the time. Read His Word daily. Follow Him in all things.

Because of our salvation brothers and sisters in Christ, prepare your minds for action and be sober minded... (1 Peter 1:13). The situations throughout the world will do one of two things; either make people terribly afraid or help them trust the Lord that much more. Which camp do you fall in?
